AIM ACADEMIA INDUSTRY MILITARY

HEALTH R & D SUMMIT

2025 SPONSOR PROSPECTUS

“From the bench to the battlefield”

Military Health City USA’s premier networking and collaboration conference in support of the life sciences industry and military medical mission.

TWO DAYS | ONE MISSION

The AIM Health R&D Summit serves as a premier platform uniting academia, industry, and the military to drive collaboration and innovation in life sciences. Building on the success of 2024, AIM fosters partnerships that accelerate the development and commercialization of transformative medical technologies, with a focus on advancing the military medical mission and dual-use applications. By connecting top innovators across sectors, AIM creates pathways to commercialization while addressing critical challenges in military healthcare.

ATTENDEE OVERVIEW

San Antonio, often referred to as "Military Health City USA," serves as a vital hub for military medicine and life sciences innovation. Home to Brooke Army Medical Center (BAMC), the largest hospital in the Department of Defense network, and a robust Defense Health Agency (DHA) presence, the city is a cornerstone of medical research and care for military personnel. The UT Health San Antonio system, with its Military Health Institute (MHI), further enhances the region's healthcare ecosystem. Key industry partners, such as VelocityTX, are driving transformative efforts like the Innovation District—a globally recognized, life sciences-focused mixed-use development. Against this backdrop, the AIM Health R&D Summit provides an unparalleled epicenter for the convergence of professionals from academia, industry, and the military, fostering collaboration to advance medical research, development, and commercialization.
